With over 20 years of public service experience in state and local government in the executive and legislative branches, Jamie Kuhn is a seasoned public affairs advisor supporting the firm's Government Solutions Practice Group. Jamie is a strategic advisor devoted to practicing civic compassion to achieve resolutions to multifaceted circumstances. She is dedicated to building and maintaining relationships, as well as collaborating with partners with respectful and informed communication.

Prior to joining Foley, Jamie served as County Executive for Dane County, Wisconsin, the second most populated county in the state. She served as Wisconsin's Medicaid Director for the Wisconsin Department of Health Services and oversaw annual budget expenditures of over $14 billion. She was also the Director of External Relations for the Office of Governor Tony Evers where she worked with stakeholders focused on health care, education, conservation, the Great Lakes, and work force development.

Jamie previously served as the Director of Intergovernmental Affairs for Milwaukee County and worked over a decade as Chief of Staff for a State Senator who was the majority and minority leader, as well as the co-chair of the Joint Committee on Finance during his tenure. Jamie also has extensive experience in providing public affairs support to numerous non-profit organizations and served as a local elected official on the Dane County Board.

Jamie earned her Master's degree from UW-Madison in Social Work and has been an adjunct lecturer for the Sandra Rosenbaum School of Social Work.
